NUMBER 101.

Deputy Sheriff Thompson Assaulted Then Arrested.

Deputy Sheriff A. S. Thompson had quite an exciting time for a few minutes yesterday afternoon while trying to carry out an order of the Court on a judgment. It seems that R. J. Neely had obtained judgment against Mr. Chas. Cooley for something like $100, and Deputy Sheriff Thompson went to Mr. Cooley's store room, on Main street, to make a levy on enough goods to satisfy the judgment. In a polite manner he told Mrs. Cooley, her husband being absent, that it was an unpleasant duty on his part but he had to obey the order of the Court. Mrs. Cooley became very much enraged and informed the officer that he could not remove a single thing from the house, as everything belonged to her and not to her husband.

Mr. Thompson, however, walked to the telephone and ordered a transfer wagon, and while talking over the phone Mrs. Cooley jerked the receiver from his hand and ordered him out of the house, and proceeded to put him out, her stepson, Cleon Cooley, aged about 21, coming to her assistance and landing a vicious blow on Mr. Thompson's jaw straight from the shoulder. The officer having already received a scratch from Mrs. Cooley on the cheek that had brought the claret, became a little ruffled, and pushed Mrs. Cooley from him to the floor, he then handed the stepson one that put him to the mat. The stepson arose and started for the officer again, when Mr. Thompson pulled his gun and told him to stop or he would put both of them in jail. He stopped. Things then quieted down a little and the officer finished carrying out the order of the Court without any further trouble.

The Neely judgment was afterwards satisfied, and the goods were released. Deputy Sheriff Talbot then appeared on the scene and made a levy for $58 for rent due Mrs. Mary A. Paton. Mrs. Cooley swore out a warrant against Deputy Thompson for breach of the peace in pushing her down, and an interesting trial will be held before Judge Dandon this morning at 10 o'clock.

Stated Convocation.

There will be a stated convocation of Paris Chapter, No. 15, R. A. M., on Friday, the 11th day of January at 7 p. m. Work in the Royal Arch degree.

An Interesting and Valuable Old Relic.

Mr. John G. Redmon, one of our well-known farmers living near town on Jackstown pike, brought into this office court day an old almanac, dated 1807, published at Lexington, Ky., by Joseph Charles, to have rebound. In glancing through it we find much of interest. Mr. Redmon found it in an old trunk of his father's, Mr. T. J. Redmon, which he had occasion to look through the other day.

The book was yellow from age, but in good condition, the subject matter of every page being legible. On the back of the book and the reverse side was a table giving the post road out of Lexington, over which government mail wagons traveled, and the distances to each town and postoffice. From Lexington to Winchester, Va., was 472 miles, Baltimore, 564 miles, Pittsburgh, Pa., 346 miles, Vincennes, Ind., 193 miles, Cincinnati 86 miles and Detroit, Mich., 496 miles.

It also gives the officers of the Government of the United States at that time, for instance, "Thomas Jefferson, President and Commander-in-Chief of the Armies and Navies of the United States; Geo. Clinton, Vice President and President of the Senate; James Madison, Secretary of State; John Breckinridge, Attorney General; etc."

The following were the officers of the Government of Kentucky at that time: "Christopher Greenup, Governor; Thomas Posey, Lieutenant-Governor; John K. Logan, Secretary of State; James Blair, Attorney General; George Madison, Auditor; John Logan, Treasurer; Mark Hardin, Register of Land Office; George Muter, Chief Justice; Benj. Sebastian, Caleb Wallace, Thomas Todd, Justices of the Court of Appeals." Mr. J. T. Redmon was born in the same year of the publication of the book, which was purchased by his father, George Redmon, grandfather of J. G. Redmon, and who resided upon the same farm now occupied by Mr. Redmon. It is quite an interesting and valuable old relic.

New Blacksmith Firm.

Bradley & Brannon, the well-known expert blacksmith and carriage men, have taken possession of the recently purchased shop of E. J. McKimsey & Son, on Sixth street, and are now ready for business. These two popular gentlemen invite all their friends to call and guarantee to give them satisfactory work. They have engaged the most expert horseshoer in this section and can do your work promptly. 4-3t

Speaking At Clintonville.

Hon. Abram Benick, of Clark, will address the members of the American Society of Equity at the Clintonville schoolhouse today at 2 o'clock p. m.

Tim Murphy.

It is not often that a group of people go to law to get an actor to do a play. Nevertheless that's just what happened to Tim Murphy when he set out to produce "A Corner in Coffee." Several people claimed the rights but all wanted Mr. Murphy to act the comedy. They couldn't agree among themselves on any other point except this determination that the comedian should act the play, so, to facilitate this all claimants drew up a deed of trust, all royalties from the production of "A Corner in Coffee" are paid to a trustee and he holds them until the courts decide who owns the rights. Mr. Murphy is to act Col. Jim Johnstone in "A Corner in Coffee" at the Grand on next Wednesday night, January 16th. Who do you think the dramatic rights belong to? Cyrus Townsend Brady wrote the story; Smart Set published it serially; G. W. Dillingham published the book; Owen Davis dramatized it; Tim Murphy produced it and acts it. The ownership has become a more precious object since the great success of the play and the case promises to be one of the hardest fought of the year in the New York courts.

MARGOLEN.

"Isle of Spice."

B. C. Whitney's "Isle of Spice" returns to the Grand next Thursday, January 17th, in the richness of costume, stage grouping, stage setting, beauty and grace of chorus and mechanical effects, as seen here before. It will far exceed any similar production ever presented at this theatre. Money has been lavishly expended in the matter of costumes for this musical extravaganza and the piece is staged in splendid style. The light effects are original and startling. The female members of the company have been selected with much care and they are not only pretty of face and figure, but rich in voice.

The leading ladies of the company are Miss Minnie Chamberlain and Miss Leslie Leigh. Miss Chamberlain is a cute little Miss with a beautiful soprano voice, which she has many opportunities of using during the performance. Miss Leigh is both pretty and graceful and is sure to be a favorite with the audience from her first appearance. Her voice is exceedingly clear and sweet and when she sings "Peggy Brady," every individual in the audience will sit right up and take notice. This song always scores from six to twelve encores.

The Tariff Tax.

The collection of tariff tax on imports should be a simple matter, but the Republican politicians, acting in the interest of the protected monopolists, have purposely made the schedules intricate and conflicting. There are, at the port of New York alone, hundreds of entries of goods held up every month by protests of importers because the appraisers are continually trying to impose higher duties, by having the goods entered under paragraphs of the tariff act other than those that similar goods have heretofore been entered under. Then there is the constant fight between the importers and the government officials about the declared value of the goods in the country of their origin. The protected trusts and monopolists have, under this administration, as under former Republican administrations, controlled the appointment of the custom house officials and trust interests have been subserved by so interpreting the law as to increase the duties paid on imports, in the manner mentioned, so as to allow our monopolists to increase the price of their products, with which the foreign imports compete. The higher the tariff tax, the greater the price of the trust products.

All this maneuvering and evading of the intention of the ad valorem duties of the tariff act, is therefore in the interest of the trusts and combines that control the manufacture of home-made goods. There would not be so great reason for complaint if the increased cost of importing foreign made goods did not allow our monopolists to add to the price of their home-made products and thus make much more than a reasonable profit. The whole question at issue is, shall the trusts and manufacturers be inordinately protected and thus allowed by law to increase their profits at the expense of the American people? Even the most rabid Republican protectionists do not now claim that we have any longer any infant industries that need protecting for the infants have grown to giants and in league with the magnates of the railroads, banking and other enormous corporations control, in a great measure, the legislative, executive and judicial departments of the government, by an alliance with the politicians of the Republican party for mutual advantage and protection.

To revise the tariff law would strike at the root of these evils and although perhaps not entirely curing all of them, it would tend to greatly reduce the exorbitant profits now demanded by the trusts, most of whom are paying large dividends on their watered stocks and bonds, and would thus reduce the cost of living which is now unnecessarily too high. Unless the tariff is revised, so that the cost of living is reduced, the wages and salaries of all classes must be increased to correspond without enlarged expenses. It is entirely unfair that the few should monopolize prosperity at the expense of the many.

Porto Rica's Shame.

Bret Harte's heathen Chinese was peculiar. Noted for "ways which were dark and tricks which were vain," he has been the standard of deception ever since the poet brought him into existence. His laurel, however, are in danger. The erstwhile artless Porto Ricans have him skinned a mile, as the saying is. They are up to peculiar practices which would even make the packer who stuffs a can full of bob veal and label it chicken, blush with envy. Imbued with the desire to "do" somebody good, the open-faced islanders are importing American peas and beans, coloring them and subjecting them to various processes they do not describe for the public prints, and sending them back to the United States as prime Porto coffee.

Peas and beans are all right in their place. In some states peas are one of the chief articles of diet, and everybody knows that the very existence of Boston depends upon beans. Masquerading as coffee, both will tend to depreciate the reputation of the real article. Thus Boston is properly shocked when it hears that its own bean can be roasted and ground and actually drunk when everybody knows that its chief and only legitimate end is to be eaten. As for peas, they are all right when transformed into rich soup with just a suspicion of bacon flavoring adding piquancy to it, but stands to reason that they must be a failure as coffee. It is sincerely hoped that the Pure Food Commission will take the matter in hand, as much of the preservation of the reputation of the sacred bean and the hapless pea as for the consideration of the American stomach.

The Higher Education.

The appointment of Miss Corliss Babson, the champion woman high jumper of the universe, to be assistant to the president Vassar college, is a distinct recognition of the many qualities with which the young women of the present generation are endowed. It is not the female worm that crawls, figuratively speaking, with her nose in the dust, that gets on, these days. She who can go farthest into the air, who can cleave the blue empyrean with great leaps and bounds while the gales of the upper atmosphere flutter the slack of her bloomers, is the one to be depended upon; and she it is who gets the plums. When she is up there she sees what she wants and lands on it.

The appointment of Miss Babson has set at rest all criticism that the higher education is not recognized. Nothing in the female line could be higher than Miss Babson, when she is in championship form. She and the higher education get there with both feet.

Constantly Sighing For More.

Ruskin denied modern civilization to be a condition of mind in which, no matter where we are, we want to get somewhere else as soon as possible, and no matter how much we have, we are constantly sighing for more. We heartily agree with the Central Record when it says, the three condition are quite common, and if society could get rid of them there would be more peace and happiness. But who shall start the reform in these matters? What minister is bold enough to proclaim the truth and make a sermon properly characterizing the condition? What newspaper is strong enough to speak of the symptoms with wise words? What layman is conscientious enough to act upon convictions which follow thought upon the subject? Helter skelter the mob rushes from pillar to post, doing that which it ought not to do and striving for more when a plenty is in hand.

Jump at the Opportunity.

Whenever the Republican leaders see an opportunity to elect a trust magnate to the United States Senate they jump at the opportunity. Simon Guggenheim, the smelting trust magnate, has been elected Senator from Colorado in return for having furnished the necessary boodle to carry the State for the Republican ticket. What is the use of pretending to fight the trusts when whenever possible trust magnates are installed in the most important branch of Congress, where one Senator has more power than four Representatives of the people?

Republican Trust Busting.

The Sugar Trust was fined $18,000 the other day, but an advance of 1-16 a pound for a week or two produced enough more profit so that Sugar Trust stock advanced 3 1/2 per cent. This Republican kind of trust busting is rather hard on the consumers.

She Should Be Careful.

A Michigan Judge is asked to give a woman a divorce because her husband wouldn't permit her to talk. If she isn't careful the judge will give the defendant a set of congratulatory resolutions, and recommend that he be given a Carnegie hero medal.

Plutocratic Advice.

Rockefeller, Jr., one would think, must be training for President, for he preaches every Sunday to the public on morals, religion and the strenuous life. His latest effort was on the subject of wives and he advised unmarried men not to "marry a woman who is not in full sympathy with your ideals. Don't marry a woman simply because she is pretty." He also declared, it was a huge mistake to pick out wives only for their money. He did not tackle the subject of race suicide but that interesting subject is perhaps hardly fit for a Sunday school lecture.

To See Justice Meted Out.

The Democratic members of the United States Senate can well afford to act as judges in the fight to a finish between the Republican factions over the riot of the negro soldiers at Brownsville and see that equal justice is meted out without regard to the prejudices of the Republican factions.

What's Come Over Murray?

From The Westminster, Philadelphia.

Talking recently about the Presbyterian Brotherhood with a very alert-minded pastor, we said, "Should one hundred young men approach one hundred pastors each with the question, 'What Christian work can I do?' there would be one hundred unsatisfied young men. No earnest young man will be satisfied with the answer the average pastor will make to that question, and the average pastor cannot answer it, he does not know how." "Let me tell you a story," was the reply. "A young man came to me recently, asking that very question. I said to him, 'What time do you rise in the morning?' 'At half-past six,' was the answer. 'What time do you have breakfast?' 'At seven o'clock.' 'What do you do next?' 'Go to the offices where I work.' 'What do you do there?' 'Work steadily until twelve o'clock.' 'What do you do then?' 'Go to lunch.' 'What do you do next?' 'Work steadily until half-past five or six and sometimes later.' 'What do you do next?' 'Go to supper.' 'What do you do next?' 'Read the paper, or sometimes go to a concert, or a lecture, or a play. Too tired to do much. Loaf around home generally.' 'What do you do next?' 'Go to bed.' 'Is that a sample of every day?' 'Yes, of every day.' 'When would you do Christian work, if I gave you any to do?' 'I don't know.' 'Murray, I said, 'God has so placed you, so filled your day, that you don't see where you would get time for Christian work and I don't see. I think God does not mean for you to add any Christian work to your daily burden.' Murray looked at me a moment and said, 'I guess that's so,' and he rose to go. 'Wait, Murray,' I said; 'are there any men employed where you are?' 'Yes—many,' he answered. 'How do you do your work: as well as the rest, or more poorly, or better?' 'Oh, as well as any of them, I think.' 'Do they know you are a Christian?' 'Why, yes, I suppose so.' 'Do they know you are anxious to do Christian work?' 'No, I don't think they do.' 'See here, Murray, here's Christian work you can do: start tomorrow. Do your work better than you ever did. See what needs to be done as you never did. Help the other fellow who is behind, if you can. Let them all know you are a Christian, not by talking, but by living. Get in a spiritual word here and there. Get some fellow to drop his oaths. Show Christ living in you and controlling you. Preach the gospel among your associates by the best life you can live with God's help. I think this is a Christian work that needs to be done on a big scale. Try it. Will you?' 'He thanked me, said he had never looked at the question from that standpoint before, and went away.

"Six weeks after I met the superintendent of his department in the offices of the great corporation where he worked. He said 'Isn't Murray one of your men?' 'Yes,' was my reply, 'why?' 'What's come over Murray?' he said. I could only say, 'I don't know.' I didn't know anything had come over him. 'Well, there has. He's the best clerk in the whole force and has developed into that in the month past. He's the best influence about the whole place. The men all notice it. There's a different atmosphere in his department. He's a Christian now, sure; quiet, earnest and full of a spirit that imparts itself to others. Something has come over Murray!"

That was the pastor's story. We think the solution of the much mooted question, what can men do for Christ was reached by that pastor in that one case. When the members of the Young Men's Club begin to live in the circles where God has placed them, the Christ life up to the measure of their power, there will be more real service done for Christ than this generation has seen. The brotherhood that brothers up to unbrothered men in everyday life will accomplish more for Christ than any number of Brotherhoods whose end is met by constitutions and by-laws and meetings and addresses and banquets and longing for opportunities to do Christian work; what, they know not, where, they know not, when, they know not.

"Maplehurst's" Features.

A new feature of the spring announcement of Maplehurst Stock Farm, W. A. Bacon, proprietor, is the name of Locanda, 2:02.

Locanda has his future as a sire still before him. That he will prove a successful sire cannot be disputed on any reasonable ground. He is a superb individual, a true and tried race champion, a royally bred stallion, and in all ways fit to share the honors of the stud with his grandsire, Jay Bird. He is the fastest son of his sire, one of the greatest living sires. He is the fastest son of a daughter of Alcyon, conceded to be the greatest son of George Wilkes. His gameness is attested by his racing career. He started racing in 1900 as a three-year-old, and reduced his record every season till 1905. In his seven campaigns he has started 62 times, in only ten of which he was unplaced. Of the other 52 starts he was first in 23, second in 11, third in 14 and fourth in four. He has met and defeated every great racing pacer of recent years. He holds the world's record for 1 1/2 miles—31:54.

Although never trained to trot Locanda has shown two-minute speed for short distances at the diagonal gait, and since he is so strongly inclined to trotting crosses should get a considerable number of trotters. His only living foal, Locanda's Daughter (2:22 1/2) is a trotter that was given a record the past season with only a few weeks training. Locanda's fee will be $50 for a foal.

Jaymore, a son of Jay Bird, will also be allowed to serve mares at Maplehurst. He is the right type to sire coach horses of the highest type.

Read Mr. Bacon's display ad in another column of this issue.

He Might.

As Mr. Carnegie is so anxious not to die rich, he might advocate the abolition of the tariff, protection to the Steel Trust and he would find the enormous profits of that corporation diminish and its watered stocks and bonds not so available if such tariff revision advice was adopted.

the constituent salts. The pills, inclosed in a metal cover, are buried in the earth at the plant's roots, and the salts gradually dissolve and diffuse through the metal, giving the plants day by day the sustenance that they require. Pills are also applied to weak, sickly plants, which they help wonderfully."

Checking a Cold.

One of the best and simplest means of checking a cold at its onset is to drink in bed a glass of hot, not warm, water in which have been placed the juice of a lemon, three or four lumps of sugar and a large teaspoonful of pure glycerin. This dose should be sipped as hot as possible after the patient is in bed. Taken thus it will probably induce a flow of perspiration which will throw off the cold. The simplicity of this remedy is only equalled by its great efficiency. As with other remedies, its chance of working a complete cure is increased if applied at the beginning of the complaint.

An Odd Ceremony.

Colchester is England's great oyster fishery, and so much of the wealth and fame of the place is derived from the industry that the season is opened with much ceremony. "The city fathers sail to the fishing ground, and the mayor formally assists in raising the first dredge of bivalves. Afterward, in fulfillment of an ancient custom, there is a luncheon, at which the distinctive luxury is gingerbread washed down with raw gin, a combination which, a London paper assumes, will fix the event in memory for several days."

His Specialty.

A little boy was on his knees recently at night, and auntie, staying in the house, was present. "It is a pleasure," she said to him afterward, "to hear you saying your prayers so well. You speak earnestly and seriously and mean what you say and care about it." "Ah," he answered, "ah, but, auntie, you should hear me gargle!"

Straw Rope Swings.

Korea is perhaps the oldest country in the world, and the customs and actions that go to make up the daily life of the people are not at all governed by the logic or tradition which moves us on our enlightened way. They have no clearly regulated sports, nothing apparently that could be likened to a national game. They pass most of their recreation hours swinging in straw rope swings and seem entirely happy in the sport. The straw rope, if well made, is extremely durable and can stand considerable weight, as may be judged when three able-bodied young men impose their weight upon the swing, standing on the shoulders of one another after the manner of acrobats. It may be very fine pastime, but the average American, it is safe to say, would find in it very little appeal.

Brewster Was a Dandy.

Benjamin Harris Brewster, one time attorney general, was a most unique character. According to his idea, he was always faultlessly attired, and his makeup once seen would never be forgotten. He usually wore a bell-shaped white silk high hat with long whiskers on it, a plaited and frilled white shirt front, with a high standing collar, cardinal necktie or scarf, buff waistcoat, maroon colored Prince Albert coat with gold buttons, yellow trousers, patent leather shoes and soft frilled cuffs, which matched his shirt front, around his wrists. On the thumb of his left hand was an amethyst ring encircled with perfectly matched diamonds and a bunch of old fashioned seals in heavy gold settings dangled from his watch fob. This was his usual makeup when he attended to business at his office, which was in the old Freedmen's bank building, opposite the treasury department, or visited the United States supreme court to participate in cases which concerned the government. His voice was pitched in a high key, and this peculiarity was intensified by his sartorial getup, which always made him conspicuous at any gathering. Apparently he was oblivious of the sensation which his appearance almost invariably created.

Ten Acres Enough.

Many a man who has gone into business with the notion that he must have an extensive plant in order to succeed has found that he has undertaken too much. This was the experience of an Arkansas farmer, who for many years affluently tilled a farm of 200 acres without making at any time a comfortable living. At last he sold the land to five Italian families, who took forty acres each. A northern traveler who passed that way and was attracted by the neatness and evident prosperity of the small farms entered into conversation with one of the proprietors.

"How much land have you?" he asked.

"Forty acres," said the Italian.

"Is it all in tillage?"

"No, indeed!" exclaimed the farmer.

"Ten acres are all one man can attend to. I bought the rest for my sons."

Ten acres may seem like a small farm to most Americans, but carefully cultivated it produced for the Italian more revenue than 200 had for the previous owner.—Youth's Companion.

Plants That Take Pills.

A very large and sturdy orange tree was growing in a small pot. "If that tree," said the florist, "didn't take pills it would require a pot as big as a bathtub to grow in. But it takes pills like a hypochondriac. Chemists, agricultural experts, make plant pills—pills no bigger than chestnuts that contain sustenance for six months, a kind of tabloid food. These chemists analyze a plant's ash and make pills of

The Old Greek Divorce Law.

A clergyman was railing against divorce. "We ought to have the divorce law that was enforced in ancient Greece," he said. "If that old Greek divorce law was put into effect, I am persuaded that divorces would fall off 60 to 70 per cent. This law was that when a man got a divorce he could not under any circumstances marry another woman younger than his ex-wife. An innocent law, a belief law, not much to look at, but how many divorce suits would be nipped in the bud if all husbands knew that after the separation they could not marry younger women than the wives they had cast off?"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Regular Light Giving Animals.

A peculiar light giving animal found in southern California waters is the heteropod. The heteropods, dusky white and almost shapeless, can often be seen floating on the clear water. Their bodies are almost transparent, and they have in addition to a long tail a powerful sucker, by which they cling to seaweed. When these creatures are irritated they seem to emit a light—red in this case—seemingly from the center of the animal. Of all the light giving animals the salpa is said to be the most wonderful. Like the heteropod, this animal is provided with claspers that enable it to fasten to seaweed and rocks. So plentiful are they in Californian waters that the Santa Catalina channel, which is from eighteen to twenty miles wide and about forty-five miles long, is at times literally covered with them as far as the eye can reach. Covering the entire surface and gleaming like gems in the sunlight, they present a beautiful picture. These animals constitute a delicacy much sought for by whales. Some of them shed a silvery light, while others yield blue and others red light.

Rivers That Flow Backward.

Near Argostoli, a town on one of the Greek islands, four little torrents of sea water, rolling on an average fifty-five gallons a second, penetrate into the fissures of the cliffs, flow rapidly inland and finally gradually disappear into the crevices of the soil. Two of these water courses are sufficiently powerful to turn all the year round the wheels of two mills constructed by an enterprising Englishman. This seems at first sight absurd on the face of it, but it is quite easily explained. The hills of the island are of soft, calcareous rock, full of fissures, and suck up water like immense sponges. In consequence the pools in their subterranean caverns are always lower than the surrounding sea, so to restore the balance these little brooks, fed by the waves, are always descending inland. The curious yet natural result of the constant evaporation of the sea water is that gigantic masses of salt crystals are constantly forming in the caves.—Strand Magazine

WALTER DAVIS!

THE CHINESE DOCTOR

HIS REMEDIES ARE OFTEN WORSE THAN THE DISEASE.

Powdered Spiders, Roast Snakeskin
and Stewed Goose Quills Are Common Prescriptions—Superstition a Large Factor in Medicine.

A friend of mine related to me the following dialogue which she recently overheard between a Chinese doctor and an old woman:

Old Woman—My daughter-in-law has had a lump coming in her throat for four months, and it has now grown so that she can swallow only with great difficulty. We are distressed. By and by she will not be able to swallow. Then she must die. Do tell me if my daughter-in-law can be cured.

Doctor—Yes; she can be cured very easily, and the medicine you have to use is not costly, but rather difficult to obtain.

Old Woman—Oh, do please tell me what it is. However difficult, I will do my best to get it. No, please, doctor, tell me what it is.

Doctor—First, get the slobbers of a cow. This can be done by washing the mouth of a cow. Then you take these slobbers and boil them down, after which you must stir in a little rice flour with a feather from the tail of a duck. Then take the paste and roll it into pills. When all these pills are taken the lump in your daughter-in-law's throat will immediately disappear.

Old Woman—Oh, doctor, I thank you. How can I thank you enough for giving me of your wisdom?

Doctor—I assure you, madam, it is nothing at all. Please, I beg you, do not thank me.

Old Woman—Oh, doctor, I shall never forget you for your kindness to me. I do not deserve it. I do not deserve it.

Is it any wonder that sickness prevails among all classes of the Chinese, and that the living of their race is only a "survival of the fittest," or, rather, the unfit?

The remedies given by Chinese doctors are seldom other than ridiculous and are often worse than the complaint. Many of the most common prescriptions consist of powdered spiders, roasted snakeskins, fossils, rhinoceros horn shavings, asbestos, moths, stewed goose quills, etc. It is declared that the more disgusting the medicine the more efficacious it is, which assertion, if it is true, would mean that China is full of Methuselahs.

Much superstition exists in regard to nearly every complaint. Foreign physicians in China are often approached by natives who, upon being asked what the matter is, reply in a low voice, "I've got that." When pressed as to what they mean by "that" they seem unable to answer otherwise than "I've got that." In such cases it is usually discovered that the patient has malaria, and the unwillingness to name the disease is due to a belief that malaria is caused by an inward devil and the chills are due to his satanic majesty's natural gymnastic proclivities.

During the night in the cities mothers are frequently met who, while wandering slowly up and down the streets, cry out mournfully: "Come back! Come back!" In the rear, at a little distance, follows a child, who answers: "I'm coming! I'm coming!" These wanderings and cries are sometimes continued for hours and are explained by the fact that at the mother's home there lies a sick child in an unconscious or comatose condition, and the mother, in the belief that its spirit has fled, is searching the streets for it. The child following represents the departed spirit, whose return is supposed to be hastened by the cry, "I'm coming!" In the absence of a child to follow, the mother often waves a child's jacket in her hand while in a monotonous voice she croons beseechingly to the spirit to return.

Smallpox is a disease from which few, if any, escape in China, and so prevalent is it that it has its own special devil. This devil can be appeased only by the patient always referring to his eruptions as "heavenly flowers" and by wearing a red cloth tied around his head. In some provinces, however, considerable progress has been made in the amelioration of this disease by inoculation. This is done in childhood by snuffing up the nose the powdered scabs from a diseased person's inflammation. Whether this was discovered by accident, by some idea of medical science, by following the theory that the "hair of a dog is good for the bite" or by adhering to the general belief that the worse the remedy the quicker the recovery is difficult to determine.

The manner in which the Chinese treat their physicians is, to say the least, most inconsiderate. Should a speedy cure not result from the doctor's treatment the patient calls in another and, if no better, yet another, and so on in rapid succession until, all human aid failing, he, if miraculously, he has so far survived, goes to consult his gods, after whose treatment he is usually carried to the cemetery. The method of consulting his gods is rather a peculiar one. If unable to go himself he proceeds by proxy to the temple, which is entered in the most solemn manner possible. Every three steps the seeker after health or his proxy prostrates himself and kowtows three times. He continues this until he comes into the presence of the health idol, whereupon a basket containing many bamboo sticks, upon each of which is a number, is given him. This he takes and, moving it violently in all directions, pronounces divers prayers and incantations until one of the sticks falls from the basket. This is then taken to a certain priest stationed inside the temple, who, according to the number, writes the proper prescription, which the patient gets filled at an apothecary's shop.

The fitness of a Chinese physician for his profession is determined according to no special method. He neither has to study nor pass any examinations—in fact, no particular quality is necessary. Frequently a man who has failed in business sets up as a physician, to do which he needs only to "hang up his shingle," as it were, and, in truth, this is about all the stock in trade he possesses, with the exception of acupuncture. Sometimes he gets an old book of prescriptions from some retiring practitioner and at once considers himself as perfectly and empirically qualified to kill. It has been said that the doctor most entitled to confidence in the sight of his countrymen is the man whose father has been one before him, and the confidence increases should his grandfather have followed the same profession. This, it might be supposed, is due to an ignorant belief in the influence of heredity; but, according to the Chinese, the value in their eyes consists in the son or grandson possessing all the prescription books of his sires.

This important, self esteemed personage enters the sickroom in the most ostentatious manner and talks of parched grasshoppers, boiled tiger's blood and snail and worm infusions with as much gravity as a priest expounding the Scriptures. As he peers out of the semidarkness of a Chinese bedroom through his great, uncouth bone or copper rimmed goggles he looks as terror inspiring as the most hideous chauffeur, and, unfortunately, leaves death as often in his wake. His diagnosis of a case is rather singular. This is done by feeling the different pulses of the human system, of which, according to him, there are many. The pulse at each wrist is divided into three and these three again into two each, according as the pressure is light or heavy, thus making twelve. As each of these indicates a different organ of the body, the states of a dozen real or imaginary organs are determined.

Acupuncture has been in use among the Chinese from time immemorial. Many directions are given as to its application. The operator has a manikin full of holes, and by close study of this he learns where to drive his needle, the latter being inserted in the parts of the body which may be pierced without fatal results. Sometimes heat is applied to the outer end of the needle, but never before insertion. The needle has been described as follows: "It is very much like a sewing machine needle, but longer and coarser. Some of the Chinese doctors have needles two feet long and are supposed by ardent admirers to be able to drive these instruments entirely through the patient's body, but the great size of the needles is in reality intended to represent the greatness of the owner's skill and reputation. The needles used are of nine forms—the arrow headed, blunt, puncturing, spear pointed, unsiform, round, capillary, long and great. The point of insertion, the depth and the direction are all important, and the method is usually to drive them through the distended skin by a blow from a light mallet. They are frequently made red-hot and occasionally left in the flesh for days together."

A friend tells me that not long since, hearing fearful cries issuing from a Chinese home, she entered and found a mother stabbing her son two or three inches in the back with a needle. Upon inquiry she learned that this was being done to cure a severe toothache. Certainly this was a remedy worse than the complaint and a stretching of the counter irritant theory to its breaking point.—Cor. New York Tribune.

Origin of the Olympic Games.
Each tribe wished for itself the credit of having established the festival which drew to Olympia the strength, beauty and intelligence of all Greece. Some claimed that Zeus established the festival to commemorate his success in the contest with Cronus for the sovereignty of heaven, a myth which seems to point to a Pelasgic origin of the games. The Achaeans coveted the honor for their hero Atreus and Strabo for the Eteians. More widely credited was the belief that the games were established by the Cretan Hercules, who in play challenged his brothers to run a race and to crown the victor with a branch of wild olive. To the interest of the Dorians was the myth of Apollo outrunning Hermes and Ares. But such myths do not necessarily imply a remote antiquity for the events to which they give a poetic coloring. It is more to the point that Homer describes several of the contests represented afterward in the great national games, and that some of them may even be found in Egyptian wall paintings of the second and third millennium before Christ.

Horrible Flowers.
"Look out," said the farmer, compressing his nostrils with forefinger and thumb. "There's skunk cabbage growing there."
They hastened past the skunk cabbage patch, and finally, when it was possible to breathe freely, the farmer said:
"Skunk cabbages are not the only foul smelling plants. Stapelias smells so much like carrion that bluebottle flies often lay their eggs on them, mistaking the thick, fleshy flowers for dead birds or decomposed kittens."
"The rafflesia of Sumatra smells so strong that it is always enveloped in a buzzing cloud of flies. It is a giant flower, a yard in diameter, and its odor makes you think of glue factories, garbage converting plants and fertilizer works."
"The Cactus grandiflora and the Pedaria foetida are tropical flowers of so terrible a smell that the former kills all other growths within ten yards of it, and the latter, with one whiff, gives a human being a headache."

Dangers of Defective Plumbing!

Defective plumbing permits the entrance into the house of sewer gas bearing germs of contagious disease to which the human system readily succumbs. Sewer gas is not necessarily generated in the sewer, but is frequently created in the plumbing system within the home and enters the apartments through defective fixtures. If in doubt consult us regarding the piping and repairing defective fixtures with "STANDARD" Porcelain Enamelled Ware, acknowledged as the best sanitary equipment.

A New Dormitory.

The School of Reform at Lexington is to have a new dormitory to cost five thousand dollars. It will be built by the Ford & Johnson Company which has leased the services of one hundred boys for the manufacture of chairs and similar goods. The Company pays thirty cents per day to the State for this labor and in order that the boys may go to school in the afternoon another hundred will reverse this order.

A Bourbon Boy Honored.

The Middletown (O.) Daily News has the following to say of a Bourbon county boy who has made good since leaving his old home:

"After years of service at the head of the First National Bank, of this city, Captain Robert Wilson by his own desire, throws off the burden of financial care as president of this great institution and places it in the hands of one, who, comparatively young in years, has the business experience that assures its continuance as one of the great financial institutions of the State."

"Colonel Renick, formerly cashier of the bank, was the choice of the directory for the Presidency. The honor came to him unsolicited and will be borne with the modesty that is characteristic of the genial Kentuckian."

"Mr. Morris Renick is not only a business man of experience, but has the energy and yet the caution and excellent judgment that makes him eminently the man to assume the arduous responsibilities that his predecessor lays aside, and his many friends congratulate him on assuming his onerous duties."

"While regretting the retirement of Captain Wilson the business interest of Middletown are pleased with the selection of his successor who pre-eminent ability for the place will retain the confidence and good will of the public for the First National bank."

Mr. Renick is a son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Renick, of this city and his host of friends in Paris and Bourbon county will be pleased to hear of his successful business career.

After McClellan.

Attorney General Jackson has filed suit in the New York Supreme Court against George B. McClelland, praying that McClelland be ousted from the office of Mayor of New York City on the ground that he is a usurper and that William R. Hearst is legally entitled to the office.

The Home Merchant.

Who is the home merchant? He is the man who helps pay for the streets upon which you walk; for the schools in which your children are (and perhaps you were) educated; he helps keep up the church in which you worship; he is the man who builds a home which enhances the value of your property; every subscription paper that is passed around, his name is on it; he is the one who cannot afford to swindle you; he carries his share of the burdens of good government, and stays with you in the sunshine and darkness, in adversity and prosperity. But these are but a few of the reasons why your patronage should be given to the home merchant.

Death of Isaac M. Dailey.

The Tazewell, Va., Republican contains the following death notice of a prominent citizen, he being the uncle of Dr. M. H. Dailey, of this city, and Dr. W. G. Dailey, of Millersburg, which will be of interest to the many friends of these two popular gentlemen in this county:

"Isaac M. Dailey, one of the oldest, best known and best citizens of Tazewell county, died at his home near Gap Store on last Thursday morning, the 27th ult. He had been sick only about four days, the cause of his death being pneumonia. The deceased was born and had lived all his life on the farm where he died. He was an excellent man and a noble Christian gentleman. He was a gallant Confederate soldier, having served faithfully as a member of the 29th Virginia Regiment of Infantry, which was a part of the historic Pickett's division. His ancestors were the pioneers of Tazewell county, his mother being of the Cecil family. The deceased was a genial, hospitable man, and for many years had been a devout member of the Methodist church. He is survived by one son, John D. Dailey, Esq., and one daughter, Mrs. Margaret Young, of Bluefield, W. Va. A number of grandchildren also survive him, among the number Dr. T. E. Peery, the distinguished specialist, of Belufield. The death of this venerable citizen was heard of with regret by all who knew him."

"On Saturday, the 26th ult., funeral services were held at the residence of the deceased, conducted by Revs. Wiley W. Yost and M. A. Waldorn. The remains were buried in the family graveyard nearby. Although the day was very inclement, a large gathering of friends and relatives attended the funeral and burial services."

Precious Jewels.

Upward of $33,000,000 has been paid for diamonds and other precious stones imported at New York in the present year, as shown by figures compiled by the customs authorities preliminary to the annual report to be sent to Washington. This exceeds that of the last calendar year by $6,000,000.

Strong Fleet for Atlantic Coast Defense.

The Atlantic coast of the United States will be guarded by the strongest fleet in the world after February 15. The fleet will be composed of sixteen battleships, four armored cruisers, two squadrons of torpedo boat destroyers and several protected cruisers. The great fleet will be under the direction of Real Admiral R. D. Evans and, according to orders from Secretary McCall, it will be organized in the Caribbean sea.

A Traveling Crook Forges Five Drafts on Paris Bank.

Mr. George Alexander, President of the banking house of George Alexander & Co., of this city, was notified a few days ago by the President of the Bank of America, of New York City, that there drafts, two for $20 each and one for $50, were presented to the Bank of America for payment, through the New York Clearing House, and were rejected. The drafts were drawn on Geo. Alexander & Co., of this city. They were recognized as rank forgeries by the New York banker, who at once notified Mr. Alexander. They were endorsed "Owen Davis, Assistant Cashier," and made payable to the order of "E. E. Leslie," and were also endorsed by Leslie.

Mr. Alexander tells us that since the above news reached him he has been notified by the President of the Bank of America that two more have turned up for $50 each.

Three Cornered Fight in No. 2.

The election of a Democratic County Committeeman in Paris precinct No. 2, Wednesday, at 2 o'clock, rather suddenly developed into a very pretty three cornered fight, turning out with everybody in a good humor with no scores to heal. The election was called by County Chairman James H. Thompson to fill the vacancy made by the death of Mr. George T. Lyons.

Mr. Buckner Woodford was unanimously elected chairman of the meeting, and Mr. Swift Champ, of the News, Secretary.

After the chairman had stated the object of the meeting, the following candidates were put in nomination: William Hinton, Jr., Whittington Mann and R. K. McCarney.

The friends of the three candidates were then divided off into three bunches and on motion the chairman proceeded to count, which resulted: McCarney, 33; Mann, 23; Hinton, 22.

On motion, Mr. Hinton was then dropped, and the vote between McCarney and Mann resulted as follows: Mann, 52; McCarney, 43.

The genial Mr. McCarney took his defeat good naturedly and laughingly accepted the congratulations of his friends on his defeat.

The ladies of the Christian church at Harrodsburg will tender their pastor, the Rev. Dr. M. G. Buckner, an elaborate banquet tonight. The banquet is given to Dr. Buckner in appreciation of his earnest and effective work, not only in his own church, but in that community as a whole. Dr. Buckner is an old Bourbon county boy, a grandson of the late Elder John Allen Gano.

Elder Carey E. Morgan will fill his pulpit at the Christian church as usual Sunday. Morning subject, "A Question Worth Thinking About." Evening, the second of the series, "A Man and His Home."

Rev. J. P. Strother will be in his pulpit at the Methodist church Sunday. Subject at 10:45 a. m., "The Parable of the Field," at 7 p. m., "A Man More Precious Than Gold."

Rev. Joseph S. Malone will fill his pulpit at the First Presbyterian church, corner Fifth and Pleasant streets, Sunday. Subject at 10:30 a. m., "Why Jesus Would Not Come Down From the Cross." Evening subject, "The Liberator."

Prominent Eastern Turfman.

A. L. Aste, of New York, prominent in turf circles, and known in the East as "King of Bootblacks," has been the guest of Mr. Catesby Woodford at "Raceland," for several days, leaving for his home yesterday afternoon. Mr. Aste is the owner of Jack Point, by Sir Dixon, who has become a great show horse, and the following brood mares, which he has wintered at "Raceland": Sweet Marjorie, half sister to Nasturtion, by Imp. Gold Finch; Eye-let and Princess, by Imp. St. George. He says he never saw horses in a more thrifty condition than those at "Raceland."

Mr. Aste started in life a poor boy, a bootblack in New York City, and managed to save up several hundred dollars. His first venture in the thoroughbred business was to pay $500 for a colt at one of the big Eastern sales, and in less than an hour after making his purchase to sell the colt to Mike Dwyer for $3,000. He then bought Nasturtion as a yearling and after winning three races with him sold him to W. C. Whitney for $50,000. He has since become one of the wealthiest and most prominent turfmen of the East.

A Fine Mineral Spring in Bourbon.

A mineral spring has been discovered on the farm of Mr. I. F. Chanslor, about half mile from Millersburg, near the forks of the Maysville & Lexington and Cane Run pikes. The flow is said to be strong and the water contains iron. It tastes very much like the Swango water of Wolfe county. A sample of the water will be sent to the chemist of State College for analysis. Mr. Chanslor says that the water runs from this spring freely at all seasons of the year, and he has known for a long time that the vein existed, but did not give it any consideration until a few days ago, when his special attention was called to it by Mrs. P. L. Dimmitt, who is a close observer. Mrs. Dimmitt says her attention was attracted to it on account of the sediment forming at the opening of the spring, resembling iron.

Mt. Sterling to Have Hospital.

Incorporation articles have been prepared at Mt. Sterling, forming a company with $12,000 capital for the erection of a hospital in Mt. Sterling, and a new structure of modern design and equipment will be built at once. The building will be of brick. The physicians of that city are at the head of the movement.

H. MARGOLEN.

Important Real Estate Deal at Millersburg.

Dr. C. B. Smith Wednesday morning sold his property, on corner of Main and Fifth streets, in Millersburg, to the Farmers' Bank.

This property is at present occupied by the Millersburg postoffice and Bourbon Home telephone exchange. The bank will at once begin remodeling the building and make it one of the handsomest in the town. The Bourbon Home telephone exchange will be moved from its present quarters to rooms up stairs in the same building, now occupied by Mrs. Frances Collins. The postoffice will be newly fitted up with the latest improvements and conveniences, in the rooms now used by the exchange.

The bank will go into the quarters now used by the postoffice. They will build a large fire-proof vault and make other improvements.

Ex-Parisian Burned to Death.

A telegram from St. Louis, Mo., announced the death of Mrs. Ella Jones Longley, as the result of an explosion of a lamp. Mrs. Longley was horribly burned about the head, face and body, and died in terrible agony. Mr. Longley in an attempt to save his wife, was severely burned. The deceased was a daughter of Mrs. Martha A. Jones, of this city, and a sister of Miss Josie Jones and Mr. James Jones, both of this city. Miss Josie left for St. Louis Tuesday morning.

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a tea spoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Long Live the King!

Is the popular cry throughout European countries; while in America, the cry of the present day is "Long live Dr. King's New Discovery, King of Throat and Lung Remedies!", of which Mrs. Julia Ryder Paine, Truro, Mass., says: "It never fails to give immediate relief and to quickly cure cough or cold." Mrs. Paine's opinion is shared by a majority of the inhabitants of this country. New Discovery cures weak lungs and sore throats after all other remedies have failed; and for cough and colds it's the only sure cure. Guaranteed by Oberdorfer, the druggist. 50c and $1.00. MAN AND HIS FISTS

MAETERLINCK ON THE SCIENCE OF SELF DEFENSE.

A Tribute to the Art of Boxing, an Analysis of Human Anatomy and a Comparison of the Natural Weapons of Man and the Animals.

The fact is that if we examine ourselves well we must rank ourselves without vanity among the most unprotected, the most naked, the most fragile, the most brittle and flaccid beings in creation. Compare us, for instance, with the insect, so fearfully equipped for attack and so fantastically armored. Contemplate among others the ant, upon which you may heap ten or twenty thousand times the weight of its body without apparently inconveniencing it. Consider the cockchafer, the least robust of the beetles, and weigh what it is able to carry before the rings of its abdomen crack or the casings of its fore wings yield. As for the resistance of the stag beetle, it is, so to speak, unlimited.

In comparison, therefore, we and the majority of mammals are unsolidified beings, still in the gelatinous state and very near to the primitive protoplasm. Our skeleton alone, which is, as it were, the rough sketch of our definitive form, offers a certain consistency. But how wretched is this skeleton, which one would think constructed by a child! Look at our spine, the basis of our whole system, whose ill set vertebrae hold together only by a miracle, and our thoracic cage, which presents only a series of diagonals which we hardly dare touch with the finger tips.

Now, it is against this slack and incoherent machine, which resembles an abortive effort of nature, against this pitiful organism, from which life tends to escape on every side, that we have contrived weapons capable of annihilating us even if we possessed the fabulous armor case, the prodigious strength and the incredible vitality of the most indestructible insects.

We have here, it must be agreed, a very curious and a very disconcerting aberration, an initial folly, peculiar to the human race, that goes on increasing daily. In order to return to the natural logic followed by all other living things, though we be permitted to use extraordinary weapons against our enemies of a different order, we ought among ourselves, among men, to employ only the means of attack and defense provided by our own bodies. Were mankind to conform strictly to the evident will of nature, the fist, which is to man what its horns are to the bull and its claws and teeth to the lion, the fist should suffice for all our needs of protection, justice and revenge. A wiser race would forbid any other mode of combat as an irreconcilable crime against the essential laws of the species. At the end of a few generations we should thus succeed in spreading and putting into force a sort of pantheistic respect of human life.

Meanwhile the study of boxing gives us excellent lessons in humility and throws a somewhat alarming light upon the forfeiture of some of our most valuable instincts. We soon perceive that in all that concerns the use of our limbs—agility, dexterity, muscular strength, resistance to pain—we have sunk to the lowest rank of the mammals or batrachians. From this point of view, in a well conceived hierarchy, we should be entitled to a modest place between the frog and the sheep.

The kick of the horse, the butt of the bull, the bite of the dog, are mechanically and anatomically perfect. It would be impossible to improve, by the most learned lessons, their instinctive manner of using their natural weapons. But we, the "hominians," the proudest of the primates, do not know how to strike a blow with our fist! We do not even know which exactly is the weapon of our kind.

Look at two draymen, two peasants, who come to blows. Nothing could be more pitiable. After a copious and dilatory broadside of insults and threats they seize each other by the throat and hair, make play with their feet, with their knees at random, bite each other, scratch each other, get entangled in their motionless rage, dare not let go, and if one of them succeed in releasing an arm he strikes out blindly and most often into space a series of hurried, stunted and sputtering little blows. Nor would the combat ever end did not the treacherous knife, evoked by the disgrace of the inconspicuous sight, suddenly, almost spontaneously, leap from the pocket of one or the other.

On the contrary, watch two pugilists—no useless words, no groppings, no anger; the calmness of two certainties that know what lies before them; the athletic attitude of the guard, one of the finest of the male body. The defeated man will rise to his feet with no lasting damage because the resistance of his bones and his organs is strictly and naturally proportioned to the power of the human weapon that has struck him and brought him to the ground.

It may seem paradoxical, but the fact is easily established that the science of boxing in those countries where it is generally practiced and cultivated becomes a pledge of peace and gentleness. Our aggressive nervousness, our watchful susceptibility, that sort of perpetual state of alarm in which our jealous vanity moves, all these arise, at bottom, from the sense of our weakness and of our physical inferiority, which toil as best they may to overcome, by a proud and irritable mask, the men, often churlish, unjust and malevolent, that surround us.

The more that we feel ourselves disarmed in the face of attack the more are we tortured by the longing to prove to others and to persuade ourselves that no one attacks us with impunity. Courage becomes the more fretful, the more intractable, in proportion as our anxiously terrified instinct, cowering within the body that is to receive the blows, asks itself how the bout will end. What will this poor, prudent instinct do should the crisis go badly?

It is upon our instinct that we rely in the hour of danger. Upon our instinct devolve the anxiety of the attack, the care of the defense. But we have so often in daily life dismissed it from the control of affairs and from the supreme council that when its name is called it comes forth from its retreat like one grown old in captivity and suddenly dazzled by the light of day. What resolution will it take? Where is it to strike—at the eyes, the stomach, the nose, the temples, the throat? And what weapon is it to choose—the feet, the teeth, the hand, the elbow or the nails?

He who knows the source of justice which he holds in his two closed fists has no need for self persuasion. Once and for all he knows; longanimity emanates like a peaceful flower from his ideal but certain victory. The grossest insult cannot impair his indulgent smile. Peaceably he awaits the first net of violence and is able to say to all that offend him, "Thus far shall you go and no further." A single magic movement stops the insolence. Why make this movement? He ceases even to think of it, so certain is its efficacy.

And it is with a sense of shame, as of one striking a defenseless child, that, in the last extremity, he at length resolves to raise against the most powerful brute the sovereign hand that regrets beforehand its too easy victory.—Maurice Maeterlinck. Translated by A. T. de Mattos, in London Mail.

TWO QUEER CREATURES.

A Fish With a Reservoir and Its Favorite Prey.

The queerest of all queer eyed animals is the periphthalmus, a fish inhabiting the coasts of China, Japan, India, the Malayan archipelago and eastern Africa.

This strange creature when in pursuit of its prey leaves the sea and comes out on the sands, thus existing for the greater portion of its life in an element which, according to the nature of things, ought to be fatal to it. The laws of evolution have, however, eminently prepared it for its peculiar mode of life. Its gill cavities are so large that when it abandons the sea it carries in them a quantity of water which yields up the necessary supply of oxygen.

Its locomotion has been provided for likewise, for continued use along certain lines has so developed its pectoral fins that the creature uses them as legs and jumps along at a surprising rate of speed. Its eyes are very large and prominent and possess for a fish the peculiar facility of looking around on all sides; hence its name, periphthalmus. These eyes are situated on top of the animal's head and present a very grotesque appearance.

The favorite food of this fish, says the Medical Record, is a naked mollusk called onchidium. And in the matter of eyes this last mentioned creature is itself worthy of remark.

Its cephalic or head eyes are like those of other mollusks and not worthy of special mention. But its dorsal eyes, sometimes several hundred in number, are truly remarkable. These dorsal eyes, although they are very simple in structure, in type are the same as those of vertebrate animals, having cornea, lenses, retina and "blind spots." In the vertebrate eye the spot where the optic nerve pierces the external layer of the retina is sightless; hence it is called the "blind spot."

When this mollusk sees the periphthalmus bounding over the sands it contracts a thousand or so of little bladderlike cells in the skin of its back, thereby discharging a hailstorm of minute concretions in the face of its enemy.

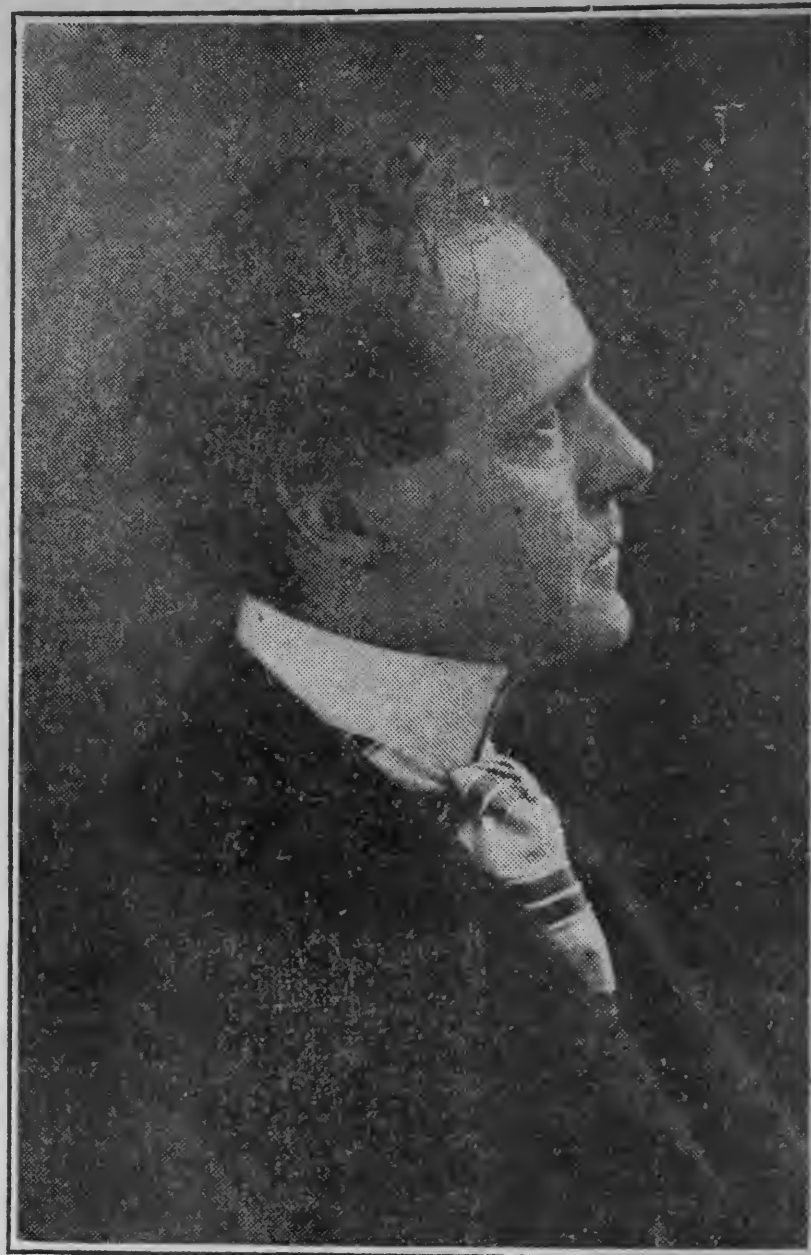

The fish, terrified and amazed by the volley, turns aside, and the mollusk is saved. Thus its dorsal eyes are of great advantage to the onchidium. It is not able, like the periphthalmus, to move those eyes, yet situated as they are all over its back it possesses the power of seeing in every direction.

Strong Soap.

An English farmer went into a restaurant in Liverpool to eat some bread and cheese. "What kind would you like, sir?" inquired the waiter. "Cheese, Yorkshire or Gorgonzola?" "Fancy name, that last," said the farmer. "I think I'll try a bit of that." He thought it so tasty that he took a pound home to his wife and left it on the sideboard in the kitchen. Next morning he came in from his before breakfast round and inquired if she had found the parcel. "Oh, yes," replied she; "I saw it there all right. And very good mottled soap it is, no doubt, when you know how to use it. But I couldn't make it lather very well when I washed the children, and after I'd done they smelled so strong that I've turned 'em out for a breath of fresh air just to sweeten 'em a bit before they go to school."

A Spanish Seaside Resort.

At San Sebastian there is no such thing as sensational bathing. Tights and lace trimmed blouses—in the water—are here unknown. Spanish women of high degree are finished coquettes, but they do not go in at all for copying the ways of fashionable beauties. The bathing dresses worn here are very similar to those worn at the seaside places on the English coasts—very pretty and suitable, but in no respect sensational, dark blue serge trimmed with white braid or crimson serge. In the mornings the sands are crowded with bathers and their friends, but no one dreams of taking out opera glasses, as at Trouville. The whole atmosphere is different, in fact.—London Chronicle.

CLOSED HARBORS.

THE BOTTLE SHAPED TYPE IS COMMON THE WORLD OVER.

It Often Happens That Nature Herself Provides the Corks Also, in the Shape of Islands, That Almost Block Up the Entrances.

If we take a trip around the world over the maps of a good atlas we find that the geographical "bottle" is a very common type of harbor the world over. The coasts of Cuba show a succession of such inclosed bays, Havana harbor being typical. It often happens that nature herself provides the corks also, in the shape of islands that almost block up the entrance, or at least block the view from the outside. Such a cork is Corregidor Island, in Manila bay, or the rocky Alcatraz fortress just inside the Golden Gate at San Francisco, and Smith key occupies a similar position at Santago.

The Annapolis basin in Nova Scotia is very typical among these geographical bottles. A fairly good map of that beautiful country will show a narrow gap on the bay of Fundy side of the peninsula. This gap, known as Digby strait, breaks through a long ridge that the people call North mountain. Through this break rush the famous tides of Fundy and fill up an inland basin of salt water twenty miles long and several in width.

The entrance, from the outside, is mysteriously invisible to the landsman's eye. To a passenger crossing the bay of Fundy from St. John it seems as if the captain were steering his trim side wheeler head on into a blue mountain wall, but at last the forested mountain opens, and through the break the interior hills of Nova Scotia close the distance. One can imagine the tremendous tide race through the Digby strait when we know that the ordinary tidal rise in this region is anywhere from forty to seventy feet. It is so great, in fact, that the wharves at Digby are two storied affairs, and people go aboard steamers from the upper or lower story, according to the height of the tide.

New York harbor is in most respects a geographical bottle—only it has two mouths instead of one. Added to the principal opening, the Narrows, a sort of side entrance is provided by the East river, leading out into the sound.

The coast of Australia presents several examples of the geographical bottle, the finest being the harbor of Melbourne. An ordinary map shows this city situated apparently upon a first rate harbor of the bottle type. As a matter of fact, the bottle is really there—fully thirty-five miles across in either direction. Into this bay, called Port Phillip, there flows the Yarra river, and, oddly enough, Melbourne, with its half million people, hides itself away nine miles up this stream. Below the city the river has two sand bars, which prevent the passage of large vessels. The heavy ocean traffic therefore has its terminus in the bay, whence the journey is continued to town by rail. The explanation for this awkward situation seems to be that in the early days of Melbourne the one idea of the settlers was to build up the river, never dreaming that one day it would become a great metropolis imprisoned behind the sands of the useless Yarra.

Rio Janeiro has a splendidly inclosed harbor—the best in all South America; better far than the shallow "Lake" Maracibo, which looks so ideal upon the map. Here again at Rio we have a great salt water inlet, some seventeen miles across, communicating with the ocean by a narrow strait.

In nearly every case these natural bottles are what the geographer calls "drowned rivers"—that is to say, the coastal lands in the vicinity have subsided, allowing the sea to flow in and convert what was a lowland valley into a partly inclosed marine area. Divers have gone to the bottom of New York bay and have found there the ancient bed of the Hudson river as the stream flowed before the mouthward part of the valley subsided into the sea. The old bed reaches through the Narrows and well out into the floor of the Atlantic. Of course, as the sea water entered the sinking valley, any hills rising thereabout would become islands in the new order of things. And there we find them to this day in almost any of these inclosed inlets.—St. Nicholas.

Lost Her Perquisite.

There are people who make a boast of their timidity, and Mrs. Stapleton is among the number.

"I was born so," she announced with plaintive pride to a comparative stranger one day. "I inherit it from my mother. She was afraid of almost all animals. She never traveled, and she was in absolute terror of thunder showers and of high winds and of all storms."

"Dear me!" said the listener, trying to be properly sympathetic. "How little enjoyment she must have had!"

"She was just like me in temperament," said the timid one pensively. "She didn't mind her sufferings so much if they were only understood, and she didn't conceal them."

"Now, I am in abject fear of spiders, and do you know at a place I visited the summer a great spider was crawling up my skirt, and one of my friends took it off and flung it away without saying one word to me. If I hadn't happened to turn quickly I should never have known there had been a spider near me! As I told her when I recovered from my hysterics, I should have thought she would have known better, as she was well aware that spiders always make me faint. But I think she'll never do such a thing again!"

A Heavy Load to Carry.

Along with dyspepsia comes nervousness and general ill-health. Why? Because a disordered stomach does not permit the food to be properly digested, and its products assimilated by the system. The blood is charged with poisons which come from this disordered digestion, and in turn the nerves are not fed on oxygen, red blood, and we see symptoms of nervousness, sleeplessness and general breakdown. It is not head work, nor over physical exertion that does it, but poor stomach work. With poor, thin blood the body is not protected against the attack of germs of grip, bronchitis and consumption. Fortify the body at once with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—a rare combination of native medicinal roots without a particle of alcohol or dangerous habit-forming drugs.

A little book of extracts, from prominent medical authorities extolling every ingredient contained in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will be mailed free to any address on request by postal card or letter. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Many years of active practice convinced Dr. Pierce of the value of many native roots as medicinal agents and he went to great expense, both in time and in money, to perfect his own peculiar processes for rendering them both efficient and safe for tonic, alternative and rebuilding agents.

The enormous popularity of "Golden Medical Discovery" is due both to its scientific compounding and to the actual medicinal value of its ingredients. The publication of the names of the ingredients on the wrapper of every bottle sold, gives full assurance of its non-alcoholic character and removes all objection to the use of an unknown or secret remedy. It is not a patent medicine nor a secret one either. This fact puts it in a class all by itself, bearing as it does upon every bottle the wrapper The Badge of Honesty, in the full list of its ingredients.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" cures, weak stomach, indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver and biliousness, ulceration of stomach and bowels and all catarrhal affections no matter what parts or organs may be affected with it. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original little liver pills, first put up 40 years ago. They regulate and invigorate, stomach, liver and bowels. Much imitated but never equaled. Sugar-coated and easy to take as candy. One to three a dose.

The Charming Woman

Is not necessarily one of perfect form and features. Many a plain woman who could never serve as an artists model, possesses those rare qualities that all the world admires: neatness, clear eyes, clean smooth skin and that sprightliness of step and action that accompany good health. A physically weak woman is never attractive, not even to herself. Electric bitters restore weak women, give strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth, velvety skin, beautiful complexion. Guaranteed at Oberdorfer's, the druggist. 50c.

CONSUMPTION'S WARNING

Inside facts soon become evident in outside symptoms.—Dr. G. G. GREEN.

The aid of scientific inventions is not needed to determine whether your lungs are affected. The first symptoms can be readily noted by anyone of average intelligence.

There is no disease known that gives so many plain warnings of its approach as consumption, and no serious disease that can be so quickly reached and checked, if the medicine used is Dr. Boschee's German Syrup, which is made to cure consumption.

It is in the early stages that German Syrup should be taken, when warnings are given in the cough that won't quit, the congestion of the bronchial tubes and the gradual weakening of the lungs, accompanied by frequent expectoration.

But no matter how deep-seated your cough, even if dread consumption has already attacked your lungs, German Syrup will surely effect a cure—as it has done before in thousands of apparently hopeless cases of lung trouble.

Hamilton, O., Big Fire Damaged Shoe Stock WILL GO ON SALE SATURDAY MORNING AT 40 PER CENT OF COST.

The Insurance Adjusters turned over to us the Miami Shoe Co. stock which was damaged by fire in the $500,000 disastrous mercantile fire which occurred at Hamilton, O, Nov 7.

THIS WILL BE A SALE OF WHICH THERE HAS NEVER BEEN A PARALLEL,

The Miami Shoe Store was the largest and most important in Hamilton, their stock consisting of the best known standard makes only. The fire occurring on November 7, the very height of the season, when not alone their regular shoe stocks were the fullest, but it included their entire stock of Xmas Slippers, Holiday Shoes and Rubbers, all of which will be in this sale.

Copied from Cincinnati Enquirer of November 7.
CITY'S HEART IMPERILED.

Most Destructive Fire in the History of Hamilton, O., Lays Waste Business Structures and Costly Stock. Loss Thus Far Estimated at a Million. Cincinnati Appealed To.

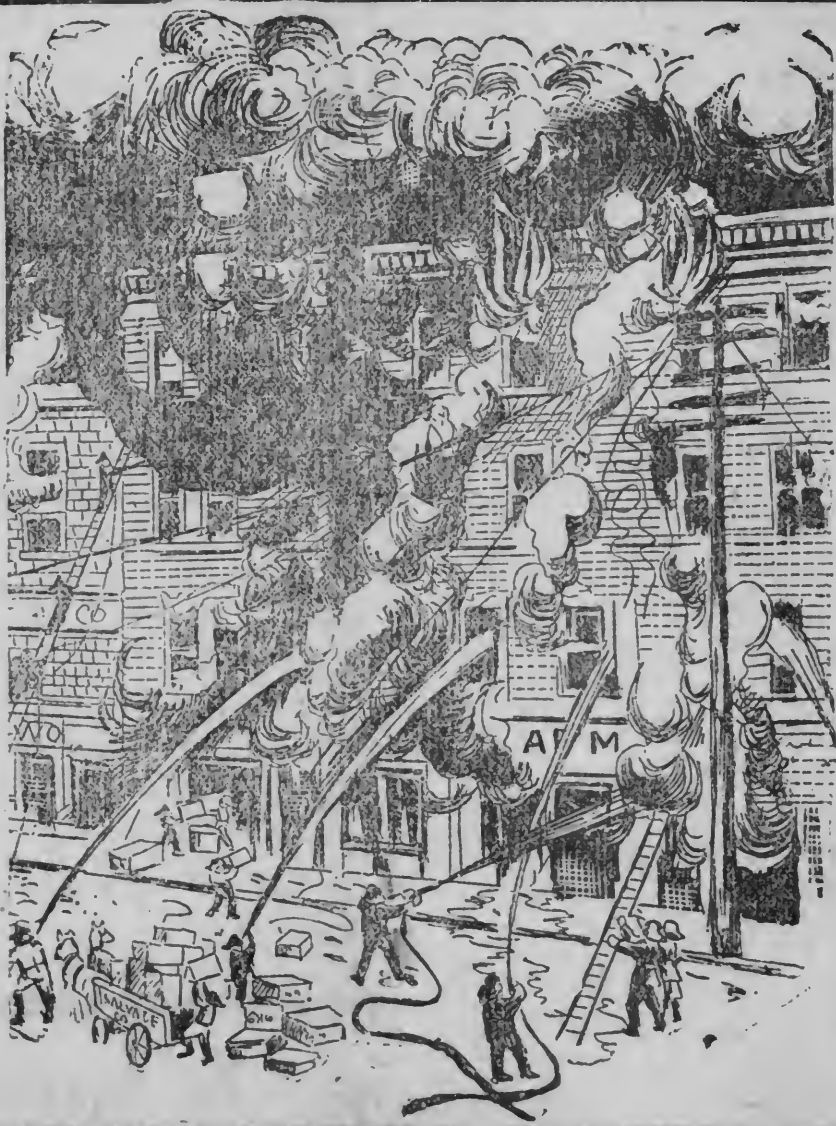

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE ENQUIRER.

Hamilton, O., Nov. 7.—The worst fire in the history of this city started at 1 o'clock this morning in the center of Hamilton's dry goods district, in High street. The building and stock of the C. D. Mathes Company are in ruins at a loss of $300,000, the owner's estimate. Holbrook's Dry Goods Store and stock adjoining are destroyed, the loss being $100,000.

The Miami Shoe Store loss is $100,000. The aggregate loss is estimated at a million.

At 2 a. m. the fire is savagely eating its way into other buildings. All that the Fire Department can do is to make a feeble attempt to stay the flames.

Mayor Thomas has sent to Cincinnati for assistance. It looks now as if the heart of Hamilton is doomed.

The magnitude of this stock can be realized when we state we were compelled to charter a factory and its entire force of employees, (the John Maloney Shoe Factory of Cincinnati, Ohio) to assist in assorting, arranging and preparing this stock ready for sale, it taking the combined forces just five weeks.

Further detail is not necessary, only we wish to state that our instructions have been to convert this stock into cash, and from the way the stock has been marked it should be accomplished without an effort. We urge every one of our customers, friends and their friends, to be here, as these are the Best Bargains that this store has ever given.

This Sale Starts SATURDAY MORNING
And will continue from day to day until the stock is sold.
